

6516209260.txt

Choice is the basis for democracy. We live in a time where the consumer decides where to spend their hard earned dollar. I live in America because I'm not told what to do, where to go, or who to listen to. But large corporations feel the need to tell me what they think I need to hear at the times they want to tell me. This is not fair to me or to the other million plus subscribers of a private service so they don't have to subject me to mainstream pop culture which is full of vulgarity, violence, and a declining moral authority. Just because the large companies didn't do this first and were too dumb to properly change their product to move with the ever changing times, then tough. They missed the boat. The train has pulled out of the station and they were too slow to catch it. I don't want to listen to, or be forced to listen to, what someone tells me they think is cool and hip, or be told what to think and told that I'm wrong if I don't want to hear the same mindless, no talent music that is considered good to the masses according to 13 year old teenagers who make up the majority of dollars spent on entertainment which is not what America is about and has no bearing on what the majority of real America is about. This is a pay service, I'm paying for what I want to hear because it's my dollars. If the scared parties can't provide a reliable service, then I'm taking my business elsewhere.

If conventional radio was as good as this service then they wouldn't be scared at the thought of losing wads of cash, which is basically what this is about, large corporate cash.

Jason Malmont
Subscriber of XM radio
And proud supporter of the Bill of Rights.

In case you forgot, I'll remind you.

Amendment I

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.